How-To Start Care for Spirits

To care for a spirits you must also care for the vessels they are in. The care of their vessels should be chosen wisely as to not cause any damage.

If the vessel is made of solid silver or sterling silver you can use a silver polishing cloth to remove oxidation, soap and warm water with a washcloth, paper towel or soft brush toothbrush.

If the vessel is made of gold you can use a soft jewelry cleanser or soap and warm water with a washcloth, paper towel or soft brush toothbrush.

If the vessel is made of wood, stone, ivory or metal you can use soap and warm water with a washcloth, paper towel or soft brush toothbrush.

Do not be afraid to clean the vessels of your spirits if they are dirty or otherwise soiled. Keeping their homes safe, secure and clean is important to their energy levels. If they are neglected or ignored they will not be as responsive as they normally would be.

If your vessel is a ring that is too small or too big you can resize without danger to the spirit as long as you place them with a jeweler you trust.

If you received a vintage vessel and it came to you missing stones or embellishments it is not a big deal but if you lose more than 1 or 2 additional stones or pieces once you come to own the vessel it is important to replace and repair what has been lost.

If your vessel has a crack or break it is important to repair the vessel to the best of your ability.

Remember that spirits are completely aware of your heart and your intentions. If you cannot afford a proper repair and you fix it to the best of your ability your spirit will know your loving place of heart and that is what is important.

Giving your spirits treats of food, music, poem, or other enjoyments is a nice gesture and greatly appreciated by your spirits. It is important to give them the proper treats and you should reference what your spiritual entity enjoys.
